

Isaiah Uduike

Isaiah is a university student who loves to read books and write. They are the founder of an off-campus book club which meets bi-weekly near their University. This book club is their way to meet and socialize with like-minded people who share the same interests. They need to find inexpensive—preferably free!—dog-friendly places to meet with their book club for their end-of-semester event.

Goals

- To find an inexpensive place where their book club can meet for their end-of-semester event.
- To find a location that will allow them to bring their dog—likely an outdoor space.
- To organize an open-mic night that coincides with their book club in the hopes that more people will come to their event.
- To meet more people that share their passion for books and writing.

Frustrations

- Their income is limited because they're a university student who works part-time.
- Not many well-known event spaces allow dogs.
- They are a shy, introverted person and it's difficult for them to meet new people.

“Every story I create is a reflection of myself. When I write, I’m sharing a piece of myself with the world.”

|            |  |
|------------|--|
| Age        | 22                                       |
| Education  | University student, 4 th year |
| Hometown   | University of Göttingen, Germany         |
| Family     | Single, one dog                          |
| Occupation | Student, part-time server                |
| Pronouns   | They/them                                |